According to the Japan Gazette the Mr KADO's Government would scem to have little faith in the loyalty of the people. They have adopted many of the institutions and customs of European Administrations, and conceded appear to be afraid that the wheels of progress are moving too fast, and that the car of liberty may escape from control. This of the Rising Sun during the past few years that if the Government in a brief pause have looked back and considered the rate has been excessive it will not be surprising to Harbour-Master's Office, Praya West, the maxioutside observers. They have been ad mum was 89 and the minimum 82. The vancing year by year nearer to the realisation greatest rainfall was on the 14th instant, when of a Constitutional Government, in lieu of the old despotic dual Monarchy. The native Press has eagerly availed itself of the opgrowing; its influence daily extending. The order. Government began to grow useasy, and watched this growth of journalistic power public opinion was being educated too fast. And therefore the Press laws were passed. We have already given an outline of these, Curtis, Cordes, Cohen, &c. which, though almost avowedly designed to bridle the Press, are much milder than might have been expected from a Government so lately brought into contact with the civilisawill by and bye see the wisdom of relaxing porty of firms on the Prays. some of the rules. Their neighbourhood to the Great Republic of America cannot fail to have some influence over their policy, and if may safely be presumed that when the native Press is more competent to exercise full liberty, it will not be withheld. At present there is little doubt that many journals are not able to distinguish between liberty and license. But the Government, on its part, must take care not to draw the rein too tightly. The Consorship of the Press does not exist in England; in France attempts to ] gag it have more than once been fatal to the Governments who were rash enough to indulge in them. The Japanese Government -should ponder on these historical lessons, and be wisely cautious. This could not, in his Lordinfluence, and would deservedly bring them into contempt. It is to be hoped they have not been guilty of such an egregious error in policy. Such mistakes are difficult to repair, and ought never to be made. Repeated frequently, they lead to disaffection and ultimately to revolution.

THE war in Acheen still drags its slow length along. It is one of those disagreeable cam- with you in signing the Memorial of the 5th paigns, which, owing to local circumstances, can at the will of the combatants be almost indefinitely prolonged, and is eminently calculated to damp the ardour of European troops. There is neither profit nor glory to be reaped in the fight. The unhealthy climate is, too, on the side of the natives, and more soldiers probably succumby to disease than fall in battle. The Dutch are in no small degree disgusted with their task, and their general has resolved to put himself on the defensive, in the hope that the enemy will weary of making fruitless attacks. This may perhaps be the wisest course, and probably save some apparently useless slaughter. but it is doubtful whether such a course is likely to raise the prestige of Dutch arms in Sumatra. It is difficult, of course, for those at a distance to judge of the best course to pursue; but it seems to us that it would prove more advantageous to both parties to bring the struggle to a speedy issue. The Orders for Copies may be sent to the Daily Ashantee campaign was not won by resting on the defensive attitude. The British troops pressed on, in spite of all difficulties, to Coomassie, and read King Correr a severe lesson in a few short months. Their rapid march taught the savage monarch that he had a fee to deal with who despised obstacles, and would not be trifled with. One decisive step like that will, as a rule, do more to impress the uncivilised mind with respect for European prowess and resources than a hundred successful skirmishes. Without impeaching the valour or the ability of the Dutch command. ers in Acheen, we venture to think that: Yokohama...... Mesers. LANE, CRAWFORD & Co. more vigorous line of action would hasten .. At the lepth above mentioned, our further progress was accested by water which completely filled the shaft. . How much further the mine extended in a downward direction we were anable to ascertain, but should judge, if the aprings of water were at all large, that the attaining of a much greater depth would be impossible, con the following items from the Alla :sidering the plaything need in the shape of pumps. The means used for ruising the water was of the most primitive description. On each level a hollow was formed capable of holding from 50 to 60 gallens of water; the pumps themselves were all of wood and about 6 inches square, and the handles worked perpendicularly by one man. Each of the hollows above referred to was filled by the means of a pump, and each is its turn emptied by another pump leading to the level above; in this way, step b step, the water was raised to the mouth of the mine. We found several specimens of copperore and examined them, and from their weight and colour should say that there was as much if not more than 25 per cent, of metal in them. Subsequently we found out that this wine had been a paying one even under Japanese incthods proprietorship of the mine, and these eventually led to its being closed altogether; recently, however, the dispute has been settled, and we hear that it is the intention of the Kencho to resume the work at the mine, and that almost immediately. The great natural advantages attached to this mine, the case with which the ore or metal can be brought to the coast, would insure its being remunerative under almost any management; but the great profits which would arise if the mine were under efficient Enropean superintendance will be lost until such superintendance is secured .- Rising Sun & Nugusaki Express.

EDUCATION IN CHINA AND JAPAN. Por the first time in history, public opinion. n China is beginning to make itself heard in favour of a Western system of popular education. An influential appeal to the Government at Peking for the introduction of competitive examinations in branches of European knowedge in the case of youths seeking official appointments shows a marked advance in the progress of civilisation in that great Empire. A few steps further will suffice to bring it into closer communion than it has ever been brought before with the outside world. Then the vast, natural resources of the country will become developed according to most advanced methods. tores of historical riches, too, will be opened. And in due time the energies of a dense, active, and intelligent population will be brought into direct competition with that of foreign lands. Japan was once quite as exclusive in regard to foreigners as China has ever been. During the authority of the Taicuns, or, more correctly, the Sho-guns, the absolute exclusion of all foreign influences was an essential part of the public policy; and that authority, which legan in the twelfth century, was maintained, with some occasional changes of degree, down to the year 1868. With its fall a remarkable era of rapid progress began. In 1871 the feudal system was abolished. A Department of Public Education was established, and placed under the control of a native of singular ability and vigour. In 1872, by one of those sudden acts of which only a paternal and more or less despotio povernment is capable. 53,000 public schools were created throughout ho Empire, and in all of these the same branches of knowledge as those which are being cultivated in the schools here and in England up intelligence, from the seat of war in u.d. damnged several roofs of a row of small are now being studied with the most exemplary assiduity. It must be remarked that under the old system, the Japanese were never an uneducated people. Mr. W. E. Griffis, who was formerly connected with the Imperial Japanese College at Tokio, says that schools and colleges, literature and learning, flourished exceedingly under the Sho-gun regime. Nine-tenths of the people could read and write, books were cheap, and circulating libraries were to be found in every town. The soil therefore, was well prepared for the introduction of a more complete exstem of education. But in China the same conditions exist, and as soon as Western ideas

RELIGIOUS DISTURBANCES IN BELGIUM.

A Reuter's telegram, dated Antwerp, June 1st, says :- This morning some students of the Athenmon blew out the candles which were lighted at the windows of several bouses in honour of the passage of the Viationm, borne by pricate to the sick. A number of women, who witnessed this proceeding, attacked the students, and the latter fled. The police laterfered, and the souffle was unattended by any important consequences. Throughout the day, however, there were large assemblages of people in the stroots, and the crowd took up a threatening attitude, standing armed with sticks in front of the Ather com. The students, on leaving, had to be escorted by police. This evening the crowd has been immense. The streets are guarded and barred by detachments of police. The windows of the Athenaum have been broken, and there have been individual fights that several arrests have been made.

PROMOTION IN THE NAVY. The Morning Post trusts that the discussion in the House of Commons on the question of promotion in the Navy will bear good fruit. There can be no doubt, the Post adds, that stagnation in the Navy has been very prevalent, and that many Officers have become disheartened and discontented at their prospects. Of late the rule has been promotion by seniority, and the exception promotion by selection. T reverse the plan and go back to that of old times would breed a discontent in the Navy that would far overbalance any benefit from the change. The men who do their duty efficiently, but quietly, and without interest to push their claims. would be superseded, and would feel that they had been done out of their legitimate rewards. Seniority, tempered by selection, may be endured; but selection with seniority almost ignored would give rise to infinite dissatisfac-We trust that Mr. Ward Hunt will bear in mind that contentment in the service is one of the first things to be attended to. The officers of the Navy, we are persuaded, would, regard with the atmost suspicion and dislike the introduction of the plan of selection as the chief mode of conducting promotion in the service. The difficulty must be faced other- cash, 35 cheats sold : $575 cash, 15 cheats sold : wise. A OHARMING WOMAN. BY JOHN G. SAXE. ' A charming woman, I've heard it said By other women as light as she; But all in vain I puzzle my head To find wherein the charm may be. Her face, indeed, is pretty enough, And her form is quite as good as the best, Where nature has given the bony stuff, And a clever milliner all the rest.

Intelligent? Yes-in a certain way, With the feminine gift of ready speech, And knows very well what not to sav Whenever the theme transcerds her reach. But turn the topic on things to wear, From an opera cionk to a robe de nuit-Hals, basques, or bonnets-twill make you stare

. To see how fluent the lady can be. Her laugh is hardly a thing to please; For an honest laugh must always start From a gleesome mood, like a sudden breeze, And here is a purely matter of ort-A muscular motion made to show .---What nature designed to lie beneath The finer mouth : but what can she do: If that is mined to show the teeth?

To her seat in church—a good half mile— When the day is fine she is sure to go, Armyed, of course, in the latest style La mode de Paris has got to show, And she puts her hands on the velvet pew (Can hands so white have a thint of sin?) And thinks how her prayer-book's tint of blue Must harmonize with her milky skin!

And what shall we say of one who walks In fields of flowers to choose the weeds? Reads authors of whom she never talks, . . .. And talks of anthors she never reads? She's a charming woman, I've heard it said
